honestly, I could have easily made the same error – referring to the homeless like they were animals, “ducks,” that we were going to feed the next day. So I took the opportunity to highlight to Robbie and Gabriel (my 7-year-old) that the homeless were people like us who had simply made some wrong choices in life. After all, it was their bad choices that got them on the streets. Right? (Please read on!)

I was a bit nervous about whom we were going to meet Saturday morning. I was hoping we wouldn't run into last night's drunk looking for food or the schizophrenic talking nonsense.

So we got up the next morning at 6:30. Robbie was excited. Gabriel was a bit shy and didn't want to go, but I made him go anyway. I told him that all he had to do was hand the homeless the food and move on. We got to the Impact Church building, and we each filled 4 bags with a toothbrush/paste, ChapStick, candy, crackers, socks, and a hat. And then we were challenged by one of the ministers: “It's going to be easy for you to hand these folks their bags and walk away. But I want you to talk to them, know their stories, and pray with them,” he said. So much for my earlier comment to Gabriel that all he had to do was “hand them their food and move on.” I don't think Gabriel even remembered what I had told him earlier that morning. He was really getting into it!

We got on a school bus and made our first stop at a park filled with homeless individuals. We ran into Daniel, who caught Gabriel's attention, as his middle name is Daniel. He was a man in his 60s from the Virgin Islands. He limped toward us, and then we started chatting. He seemed as normal as any of us. He explained how he was a mover, then his knee gave out and he lost his job. We gave him his bag. Asked him if we can pray with him and he replied “I never turn down a prayer,” so we prayed. He then pointed to a run-down building a few miles away where he was staying. “I get two meals there and a good shower,” Daniel said. He seemed content. “But wait a minute, what happened to the third meal? What about the afternoon snack?” thought the boys. I quickly explained the reality of living in a homeless shelter and soon after was interrupted by a Mexican lady who only spoke Spanish. The boys didn't really understand a word she was saying but were fixated on her diabetic leg ulcer. It was a textbook diabetic ulcer: a white lesion on a background of red skin. Not the prettiest picture, but as you might have guessed, the boys were staring. I explained to my boys the awful situation of not having enough money to pay for even the simplest of medications. I think they were beginning to get it!

Then it was time to board the bus. As we were walking, we heard one of the ministers asking if anyone had an aspirin for the man who was following him. “A toothache,” he said. “Does anyone have an Aspirin or a Tylenol?” Unfortunately, no one had any pain relievers. Two minutes after the bus took off, Gabriel turned to me and with genuine concern asked me what that man was going to do about his pain. I explained that he just had to tough it out. I could tell that Gabriel was unsatisfied by my answer; he really wanted me to do something about it. Maybe it was the fact that he just lost a tooth on Wednesday and could really relate to that toothache.

A few minutes later, we pulled up to a downtown location that we pass regularly when we drive to visit grandma in Fort Worth. Except that we don't usually see the homeless people we saw that morning. This time we saw a man and a woman “camped out” on the sidewalk. The boys asked me why these people had their blankets and pillows on the sidewalk...yes, another teachable moment that I took advantage of. We got off the bus and ran into Charlie, who was from Seattle. Aunt Nikki is from Seattle, so that caught the boys' attention. He told us how he came here for a relative's funeral and had no way of getting back. He told us his aspirations to get a job as an offshore cook at one of the oilrigs. He loved the boys' names and let them know it. In the middle of our conversation, we were interrupted by Michael Davis, a very friendly, cheerful man who gave my boys a high five and was very playful. Robbie really liked Michael. I think for a minute, the boys forgot where they were. This guy reminded them of many of our friends and relatives. In the middle of play, we were called to board the bus for the last stop.

What a day we had! We met eight normal individuals who happened to be in bad circumstances; so much for my “wrong choices” theory that I proposed to my boys earlier that morning. They all had hope in a better future and a great faith in God. We gave away 8 food bags and led 7 prayers; I unfortunately didn't know enough Spanish to pray with the Mexican lady. We all learned something Saturday. We learned how blessed we are to have even the simplest of things. We learned that sometimes life is not fair, no matter how good you try to be—it wasn't necessarily the bad decisions that anyone made. Most importantly, we learned the human qualities of these "ducks" that we fear at every street corner. Yes, the same ones we lock our car doors when we see them standing 50 yards away.

Tonight my boys ate most of their spaghetti without much complaining. I did have to remind them a couple of times about Saturday, and it worked! I know some things will be forgotten, but I hope my boys (and I) will remember this experience until the next time we do it! Gheath Alatrash

Change for Children

They are located in the back of the auditorium. Although you may, it is not necessary to fill in the blanks on your can. They will be collected, opened and all monies counted and deposited in our account. The church will then issue one check to Arms of Hope for the total amount given. If you want a receipt for your donation, you should write a check payable to the Pearland Church of Christ or to Arms of Hope.

Please turn in the cans to the office by December 16, so we can get your donations to them before Christmas. Thanks for having a heart for the children. James 1:27
