The following article, by Brad Harrub, Ph.D., Director, Focus Press, Inc., is being reprinted with permission in its entirety. Because of its length, it will be printed in several parts. It offers some very good points of logic to use in discussing this sin with our family members and with others.

"Questions for Homosexuals" Part Two

"... Without any hate, fear, or dislike of homosexuals, we simply want to begin a discussion by asking some questions about the logic of homosexuality. Christians, we hope you'll share these questions with homosexuals and pro-LGBT heterosexuals in order to start a discussion. Homosexuals, realize that we don't hate you or wish ill on you. Please don't dismiss the questions, as we aim to be fair by picking questions that naturally arise from the cultural discussion of homosexuality.

[See part one for the first two questions Dr. Harrub asked - DC]

#3 Shouldn't Christian preaching against homosexuality be considered loving (even if thought to be misguided)? If someone thinks I'm separated from God and destined for eternal punishment according to their belief set and yet they allow me to live without telling me of the danger they believe me to be in, can I really say they love me? As atheist Penn Jillette asked, "How much must you hate someone to not proselytize them?" So, those who agree to the belief that homosexuality is sin (should, although not in every case) do so out of love and not hatred. At worst, you would have to consider them misguided.

#4 What's the purpose of homosexual exhibitionism? Between the gay marriage ceremonies at the Grammys and the Rose Bowl Parade, gay "kiss-ins" at Chick-Fil-A, and other such activities, why is there such a need for public display? Those who disagree with you won't be convinced by in-your-face displays, so I struggle to understand the purpose for doing so.

#5 What is the difference between a heterosexual man being allowed to shower with fifty women and a homosexual man being allowed to shower with fifty men? Yes, this question seems crude, but Michael Sam's announcement logically demands it. It's hard to believe anyone would accept the first scenario, but the second is being applauded as brave and courageous. The problem is, they're the exact same thing - a person being allowed in close quarters with human forms to whom they are physically attracted. Why is one allowed and the other frowned upon?

Again, these questions are asked without hate or discrimination, but they are based on what logic demands along with a biblical worldview. Visit us at www.facebook.com/focuspressinc if you have answers, feedback, or questions.
