[This article is the final installment of an article taken from Focus Press. It was written by Brad Harrub, Ph.D., Director, Focus Press, Inc. and is being reprinted with permission. Due to space considerations, questions 1 thru 5 will be reprinted without the

“... Without any hate, fear, or dislike of homosexuals, we simply want to begin a discussion by asking some questions about the logic of homosexuality. Christians, we hope you’ll share these questions with homosexuals and pro-LGBT heterosexuals in order to start a discussion. Homosexuals, realize that we don’t hate you or wish ill on you. Please don’t dismiss the questions, as we aim to be fair by picking questions that naturally arise from the cultural discussion of homosexuality.

- #1 Is any person who doesn’t expressly support homosexuality automatically a homophobe?
- #2 Why is there no discussion of the risks of homosexuality?
- #3 Shouldn’t Christian preaching against homosexuality be considered loving (even if thought to be misguided)?
- #4 What’s the purpose of homosexual exhibitionism?
- #5 What is the difference between a heterosexual man being allowed to shower with fifty women and a homosexual man being allowed to shower with fifty men?
- #6 How far does the “same love” argument go? The main argument for homosexuality today is that no one has a right to say anything against two people who love each other. The secondary argument is that you don’t decide whom you’re attracted to. As for the first – we must also accept love between minors and adults, polygamous love, etc., right? As for the second – what if you’re strongly attracted to another man’s wife? You can’t help the attraction. Do you act on it? Is that acceptable? For what reason should humans be allowed to be enslaved to their sexual appetites? When “love” is the only standard, the standard is going to shift a lot. The question requires an answer.

#7 Must one give up their religious beliefs if they are to avoid being labeled homophobic? Sure, a number of people in this day and age call themselves Christians while supporting homosexuality, but those who take the Bible at its word aren’t afforded that option. The Bible directly calls homosexuality sin (Leviticus 18, 20, Romans 1, 1 Corinthians 6). That doesn’t mean we discriminate against it as some kind of higher form of sin, as all sin separates you from God. But is it hateful to believe in the Bible? For example, when Russian men’s hockey captain Pavel Datsyuk was asked if he supported homosexuality, he responded “I’m an orthodox and that says it all,” appealing to his faith as a member of the Russian Orthodox church (a group who believes God is against homosexuality). The internet broke out with a number of protests, with people labeling Datsyuk hateful, bigoted, and homophobic for such a simple, benign, non-hateful statement of fact. Do culturally accepted actions take precedence over someone’s faith, though? Must faith bend itself to appease newly-developed cultural belief systems? Does it automatically imply a deep-seated hatred when I say A. I believe in the Bible. B. The Bible calls homosexuality sin. C. Therefore, I believe homosexuality is sinful?

Again, these questions are asked without hate or discrimination, but they are based on what logic demands along with a biblical worldview. Visit us at www.facebook.com/focuspressinc if you have answers, feedback, or questions.

YOUTH EVENTS

Teen Devo at the Laytons' house following this Sunday evening's services.

March 30, 2014

Invite someone to be your guest and to stay for a great meal!

Friends

Family Day

Deb and I want to thank all of you for the many acts of love and concern you have shown to us and to her family. You have let the Lord's light shine brightly before so many people, and you have demonstrated the love of Christ to each of us in so many ways. Thank you.

DC & Deb Brown

I would like to thank everyone for the visits, cards, flowers, and especially the prayers. I am feeling much better and trying to comply with all of the things I'm supposed to do.

Love, Minnie Harris

We are still in need of volunteers for communion preparation and sound/projector. Please check the sign-up lists on the bulletin boards to see if you can help in the available months.

KEPT IN PRAYER

Minnie Harris is now home and doing better.

Scott Westmoreland is doing a little better and may be moved to a private hospital room soon.
